Located in the northwest of the Italian Peninsula, PSA Genova Pra' is the gateway port for shipping lines serving the vast hinterland of southern continental Europe.

It is directly connected to the excellent rail and road transportation system of Italy, extending to all parts of the European continent. All major shipping lines are currently using PSA Genova Pra' as their port of call for the region and beyond.

PSA Genova Pra' has developed two direct rail connections from the terminal of Genova Pra'. The Southern Express connects Genoa with Basel in Switzerland and the Stuttgart Express links the Italian port to Southern Germany.

PSA Genova Pra' offers an electronic data interchange system with shipping lines, shippers and other users, that allows them to track their containers gate in/gate out. In addition, import and export containers receive fast gate clearance at the port.

PSA Genova Pra' is equipped with 12 cranes. It is the only terminal in the port of Genoa that can handle vessels with a capacity of up to 24,000 TEUs.
